

Availability of data

The authors declare that the datasets supporting the conclusions of this study are included within the article. Specifically, the fourth part of this paper gives the initial configurations of all aircraft, including positions, velocities and angles of direction, which are generated randomly by using MATLAB software. And the selection standard for these datasets have been given. The final research results are obtained by a series of simulation based on the above datasets.